

Poetry

NEVER DESPAIR.

Friend's gold for the man that will die it,
And peace for the soul of the weaker.
There's a land where a wine for him that will drink,
Is flowing the golden-tipped basket.
There's fame for the brows of the thinker,
He'll work and struggle to win it.
Every care-cloud that floats o'er the future
May prowl rich blessings within it.

There's a home for the son of gaunt sorrow,
A rest for the worn-out and weary,
A hope for the pallid departing,
A light o'er each path that is dreary;
There's no way so dark but the sunbeams
Will break into snowy-like whiteness.

There's no cloud so black in the heavens
But has some rich, folded up brightness;

'Tis hard to wade through the deep waters
Unseeling the shore that we cover;

'Tis dismal to look for Hope's rainbow;

When black walls of doubt hang above it;

But Faith's hand can lift up the mountains

And give to us riches supernal—

The points to the land of the prophets,

The land of the blessed Eternal.

Gleanings.

DANCING.—The celebrated Dr. Hunt gives the following chapter on dancing: That beautiful, graceful accomplishment of dancing, so perverted by late hours and the indecency of fashionable attire, has outraged many sensible people, and led them to deprive the young of one of the most simple and healthful enjoyments, because it has been abused. For myself, I can testify not only to its healthful, but to its recuperative power. The forties, may, the fifties year of my age, found me enjoying this life-cheering exercise. It should be one of the earliest amusements of our children, and care should be taken by parents that it is understood as an amusement. The frivolity and ruin of many a young man and woman are owing to the severe restrictions which impeded them in youth, released from which they rush wildly into excitement the moment they are in freedom, and sell their souls to vanity and dissipation.

A MOON QUEEN.—The scrupulousness with which Victoria paid the debts of her father, (who was at one time so poor as to be unable to transport his family from Germany to England,) is not so well known as it deserves to be. The author of the Woman of Beauty thus alludes to this trait in the Queen's character: One of the last measures of Victoria was to pay from her own private purse the remaining debts of her father—those which she and her mother had been unable by their united economies to liquidate. The people contrasted the Queen's conscientious application of her resources with the conduct of her grandfather, George III., under similar circumstances. Her father, Frederick, Prince of Wales, left behind him numerous obligations, not one farthing of which did George, on coming to the throne, think proper to discharge.

DONE BROWN.—A very loquacious lady offered to bet her husband $50 that she would not speak a word for a week; "Done!" cried the delighted husband, instantly taking the money, which the lady as soon grabbed and put in her pocket, observing very naively that she could secure it until the bet was decided; "Why?" said the husband, "I have won it already," and required her to fork over.

"Not at all," said the lady; "you are mistaken in the time—I mean the week after I am buried!" The lady went a "shopping" that same afternoon, and the husband well, nuf sed.

Varieties.

A GOOD LIFE.—How beautiful can time, with goodness, make an old man look.

THE TEST OF FRIENDSHIP.—There is nothing like a pitch pavement to test our old friends upon.

A SUSPICIOUS MAN.—He'd search a plowman for treason, and see daggers in a needle-case.

THE SOOTY SEX.—A woman is like fur—he, and she will take any form you please.

Children are earthly idols that hold us from the stars.

Louis XIV., who was a slave to his physician, asked his friend Muller what he did for his doctor. "Oh, sir," said he, "when I am ill I send for him. He comes; we have a chat and enjoy ourselves. He prescribes. I don't take it—and I am cured."

A gentleman just married, told Poole he had that morning laid out three thousand pounds in jewels for his "dear" wife. "Yes," replied the wif, "she is truly your dear wife."

The tongue of the patient develops to physian the disease of the body, and to physian the disease of the mind.

"Papa, have guns got legs?" "No." "How do they kick, then?" "With their breeches, my dear."

The best legacy a man can leave his children is the ability to take care of themselves.

A man is a fanatic when he thinks so exclusively of the other world as to become unfit to live in this.

A troubled mind is often relieved by maintaining a cheerful demeanor.

"Aye, E—— who tryng to persuade little Eddy to retire at sundown. "You see, my dear, how the little chickens go to roost at that time," says auncy," replied Eddy, "but the old hen always goes with them." Aunty tried no more arguments with him.
